Dedication

This book is dedicated to the victims of the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks in New York City, their families, those killed afterward to silence truth they were telling, their families, those killed in repressive violence against the the peaceful Arab Spring protests and the wars for liberation they sparked, their families, and the U.S. Navy Seals who did not kill Asame bin Laden but were themselves killed to silence the truth they were telling, and to their families. May peace be upon them all. Praise Allah.

Introduction

Trying to catalog the history of crimes orchestrated by the Illuminati, the organized crime syndicate operated under control of the corrupt ruling class, is an impossible task for a single individual and a daunting one even for a consortium. The amount of available information on their crimes through history is vast and new information presents itself through government action, covert operations, and the mass media (to include the vast and ever-growing library of information accessible through the internet) on a daily basis. This book is not a catalog of Illuminati crimes but gives brief discussion to some categories of Illuminati crimes while focusing attention on select tactics the group uses to control the forces of politics and economy through programmed control of everyday life. In discussion of tactics, the book still remains incomplete versus the voluminous information already available to the serious and aware dissident, researcher, or average citizen.

This book also includes discussion of the Illuminati from a religious perspective. Secular readers are welcome to adopt or disregard religious understandings but the author asks for fair consideration of all material presented, the majority of which is secular-historical or scientific in nature. Observed public sentiment indicates a majority of the world's adult population is aware of a general corruption that permeates our social reality and our political and economic systems. Within that context, this book does not present any new information but articulates understandings already realized by a large segment of the earth's population. Chapters are purposefully short to encourage exploration of hyperlinked references within text and in full citations at the end of chapters.

Conspiracy

The 9/11 truth movement contends that the terrorism strike against the United States of America on September 11, 2001, was "an inside job," that the three World Trade Center buildings destroyed (the two towers and nearby building 7) were taken down in pre-planned controlled demolitions, and that both presidents and members of Congress are involved in a cover up of the operation. Dr. Steven Jones, formerly of Brigham Young University, was the first scientist known to have suggested and identified use of nano-thermite (a highly explosive material that burns at extremely high temperatures that jet fuel, office furniture, and building materials could not obtain to be able to melt thick steel girders that are used to hold up skyscrapers) in destruction of the buildings.

After the attacks, the United States Congress appointed the National Institute of Standards and Technology to investigate the assault. While NIST may have "a long-standing record in forensic science," it is an agency of the U.S. Department of Commerce whose forensic science goals do not coincide with those of law enforcement. According to its own website:

" . . . NIST is a non-regulatory federal agency within the U.S. Department of Commerce. NIST's mission is to promote U.S. innovation and industrial competitiveness by advancing measurement science, standards, and technology in ways that enhance economic security and improve our quality of life."

The forensic science goals of NIST are for improving and maintaining precise measurement standards for general commerce and for precision needed in safe design of buildings, roads, and equipment, and to support development of new technologies. Setting and maintaining precision measurement standards for safe design does not lend itself to investigating who may have purposefully defied the standards nor how they went about defying the standards. In fact, defiance of such standards may not bear any relation at all to acts of terrorism. Criminal investigations are not the mission of the Department of Commerce. NIST is not equipped to perform criminal investigations and has no history of performing them. Neither the President nor Congress openly assigned the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, Department of Homeland Security, National Security Administration, and U.S. Army, Navy, and Air Force intelligence operations to each conduct an investigation into the act of mass murder and alleged outside terrorist aggression against the United States.

Insurrection

Film and audio recordings of American Presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy demonstrate both men warning about the Illuminati. Eisenhower stated that proper government "must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence," and warned American citizens to be alert and active in guarding against abuses by what he termed "the military-industrial complex":

"The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists and will persist . . . We must never let the weight of this combination endanger our liberty or democratic processes. We should take nothing for granted."

In other words, Eisenhower - a World War II strategic hero who likely had a better understanding than most of how Hitler came to power and was a high-ranking military officer while the military was engaging in "influence campaigns" at home and abroad - warned the nation of a conspiracy to misuse government power and the nation's resources for disastrously ill ends. Eisenhower's call to take nothing for granted, echoes Thomas Jefferson's "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," meaning to always be on guard against the corrupt and to carefully watch and scrutinize those we elect.

In a speech delivered to American newspaper publishers, Kennedy made direct and blunt reference to "a ruthless and monolithic conspiracy" to not only subvert and destroy American democracy but to rule the entire world. His full "secret society speech" was couched in terms of the Cold War

The Illuminati Revealed

so it appears on the surface to be a warning about a ruthless conspiracy by the former Soviet Union to overtake America, obscuring possible true intent to encourage mass media not loyal to the Illuminati to work to expose it.

Psychopathology

“How can they do these things, don't they feel any guilt?” This classic question is asked about those engaged in planned and organized wrong doing against others. It is answered by explaining the personality disorder that allows members of ruthless organized crime syndicates and other terrorist organizations to deny any feelings of regret or remorse for causing suffering to others. A psychopath is someone who engages in prolonged and repetitive abusive behavior toward others (in general or against a subset of the population) while feeling no regret, remorse, or guilt about the violence, abuse, theft, or other violations, and without fear of consequence. Some psychologists explain that some government leaders, doctors, scientists, lawyers, and business leaders may be considered psychopaths. While of course not all in these professions are psychopaths, the point is that any place where room exists for abuse of power, a psychopath might be found.

Examples of "common psychopaths" would be serial rapists, murderers, pedophiles, arsonists, and various other abusers who do not have political agenda to control and exploit thousands or millions of people attached to their behaviors. Other examples of common psychopaths include lawyers and doctors who abuse by losing cases on purpose, providing wrong diagnosis, denying proper medicine or remedy, and committing other forms of malpractice or negligence in order to receive power gratification over others. The ill actions can be consciously purposeful or can be driven by subconscious motivations of misplaced anger related to feelings of inefficacy and the need for power gratification to offset that feeling and its related anger.

Common or simple psychopaths can and do have tragic impact on the lives of their victims, a limited number of people. A political psychopath who organizes, rises to power, and takes action in coordination with other political psychopaths may affect thousands on a local level or millions on national and international levels. Adolph Hitler is the classic example but clearly not history's only one of a political psychopath who possessed intellectual and charismatic ability to not only organize (or take charge of) an extremely large collective of fellow psychopaths under his leadership, but to also successfully invite and train thousands of others in a program of psychopathology.

Violence or other ill actions of psychopaths may appear to be spontaneous, but this is illusion. A psychopath will respond to unexpected opportunity, but also spends a good deal of time plotting in wrongdoing. Psychopaths also engage in repetitive negative thoughts of others to affirm a false justification for a right to violate others. Their deviant behavior is often hidden. This allows the projection of an image to family, friends, co-workers, and sometimes a more general public, that is far from truth. When finally charged for repetitive acts of murder, rape, assault, extortion, arson, theft, racketeering, criminally negligent malpractice or other crimes, their spouses, children, parents, neighbors, friends and coworkers are shocked to discover the secret life of someone they thought they knew well. Ability to commit crimes hidden to others is key in development of psychopathology.

How Psychopathology Develops

Psychopathology is learned behavior. It is neither genetic nor biological except to the extent that some neurological disorders may pre-disposition some people to have repetitive negative thoughts toward others and/or to lack impulse control. Most common and political psychopaths do not appear to have such conditions. Psychopathology is a personality disorder that develops over time, usually but not always beginning in childhood. Development starts when a child violates another person in some manner with result of a power gratification that is felt as an emotional positive. The violation goes unpunished by parents, teachers, or other responsible elders either because the act is hidden, a lie is told to deny responsibility and adults believe the lie, adults are teaching or role modeling the behavior themselves, or adults know of the behavior but fail to discipline the child. In some cases, punishment does occur but negative consequences are not severe enough to cancel the emotional satisfaction gained from the action and so no effective deterrent against repeating the behavior or similar behaviors has occurred.

As the child grows and matures, he or she may develop a system of patterned lies, denials, and hidden actions never effectively punished. Both the ill behavior and the habit of lies, denials, and schemes to hide or cover-up the behavior become ingrained patterned routine naturalized aspects of the person's personality and interaction with others. This is then carried into adulthood where habitual deception can be used to carry out other and increasingly severe deviant behaviors.

Adult Onset and Crime Syndicates

Adults who did not develop psychopathic tendencies in childhood can still develop the disorder. This can occur for example when someone in a position of authority develops a habit that begins with small abuses of power but grows into larger and larger abuses over time. While this can occur in isolation, likelihood of adult development of psychopathology increases and the speed of its development accelerates if it is encouraged by coworkers, family, or friends, if the person is given financial or other personal reward, and if the person experiences positive-emotional bonding with others who are encouraging the wrongful behavior. Happiness and joy of this bonding cancels any feelings of remorse and also provides a false sense of having safety in numbers. This is what occurs when non-psychopaths are initiated into crime syndicates comprised of psychopaths already banded together to carry-out crime and mutually support one another in deepening and strengthening of their psychopathology. Surrounded by such influence, the non-psychopath can develop into a psychopath.

The Power Reward

The key that allows for either childhood or adult onset of psychopathology is that emotional gratification achieved from wrongful action is stronger than negative emotion produced by punishment or feelings of guilt, and that this happens on a re-occurring basis. Psychopaths are greatly aided in putting aside feelings of guilt by a naturally-occurring physiological gratification (a literal biological brain chemistry “power rush”) from the successful exercise (or effective use) of personal power. Scientific identification and understanding of the brain chemical response to the use of power is greatly lacking. In exploring the phenomenon of a “sense of agency” (the feeling of successfully exercising power), one group of researchers found increased heart rate and changes in skin conductance are not a physiological response of the exercise of power, however, the tasks assigned to subjects may not have been significant enough to stimulate a power rush that is felt by greater exercises of power. That may also not be the proper way to measure for the brain chemical response to effective exercise of power. There may not be a change in heart rate or skin conductance that accompanies the brain chemical response - do heart rate and skin conductance change every time we have a positive emotion? The truth of a physiological response to the exercise of power is not negated by studies that did not properly measure a physiological gratification related to the sense of agency. In neuroscience, psychology, and other behavioral sciences, power-lust fueled by a physiological gratification from the exercise of power remains a vastly under-studied motivation and determinant of human behavior.

Related Personality Disorders

Passive Aggressive – This personality type hides anger and cruelty behind smiles and illusions of friendliness, courtesy, and helpfulness. Also based on programmed learned behavior, and essential to psychopaths, passive-aggressiveness is also excessively common among the general population that is not classifiable as psychopaths. Passive-aggressive acts routinely sabotage friendships and marriages as well as parent-child, coworker, and business-customer relationships. Passive-aggressiveness results from unsuccessful attempt to repress (rather than resolve) anger so that unresolved feelings of anger and powerlessness in the subconscious permeate onto actions. Targets of the actions are often not the sources of the anger.

Passive-aggressiveness manifests in subtle actions that appear to be offered with sincere intention of goodness. When they produce the opposite of the stated good intention, this appears on the surface to be accidental or coincidental. The actions are eventually identifiable as passive aggressive because they are repetitive and frequent enough that a person would have to put forth effort to keep making the same ill-fated actions or class of actions again and again. Types of passive aggressive behavior include insults hidden inside compliments, work habitually left unfinished or completed late, “accidental” goof-ups so others must redo work, broken-promises or neglect to meet responsibilities and keep agreements, favors not requested that produce outcomes opposite of their claimed intent, and other manipulative behavior hidden inside appearance of friendliness, teamwork, affection, or helpfulness. Passive-aggressive actions manipulate situations to a person's control, allowing the person to cause pain and duress to others without physical violence or outward display of anger. It allows the person to deny both anger and wrongful intent. Like other personality disorders, the actions are not exceptions caused by new or extraordinary circumstances but are routine repetitive aspects of a person's behavior pattern. Passive aggressiveness is used routinely to affect balance of power in personal relationships.

Rewards of passive-aggressive behavior are typically not financial nor material in any immediate form. The most common reward of passive aggressive behavior is also the reward that drives the illness of psychopathology – an immensely satisfying feeling of power. Passive-aggressive behaviors are done even if the behavior produces no other tangible, financial, or material reward or potential reward.

Habitual (Pathological) Liars – To keep deviant behavior hidden, psychopaths are by default habitual liars, though not all habitual liars are psychopaths (there is a type of habitual liar who makes up tales that are harmless and sometimes amusing despite that they are blatant lies). Psychopaths must lie habitually to commit and coverup violations of others, but psychopaths will also often lie in situations where nothing is gained by doing so, demonstrating the programmed nature of their behavior in contrast to decisions made by reasoned thought during a situation.

Self-destructors – Some psychopaths will turn repetitive physical and psychological violence on themselves. Examples of this include cutters/self-mutilators, alcoholics, drug addicts, habitual gamblers, over-spenders (shopping addicts), and others who engage in repetitive self-destructive actions. A person does not have to be a psychopath to have any of these disorders (they are not about seeking power over others), but some psychopaths also turn their illness against themselves in response to their repressed feelings of regret, guilt, and shame - in other words, in response to repressed anger at themselves for their ill behavior. Other personality disorders may overlap with psychopathic behaviors.

Secret Combinations

"Did they not know that God knows their secret and what they conspire together, and that God knows the things unseen?" (Qur'an 9:78; A.J. Arberry translation)

"And in that way have We set up in every township as leaders its most prominent criminals so that they scheme (against the believers). But they scheme only against their own selves – and they do not perceive it." (6:123; Ali Ünal)

"Those who commit crimes used to laugh at those who believe." (83:29; T.B. Irving)

"And when they passed by them, they would wink at one another." (83:30; Laleh Bakhtiar)

"They will never help you against Allah in the least. The wrongdoers are friends to one another, and Allah is the friend of the God-fearing." (45:19; Muhammad Taqi Usmani)

"This is an illumination for mankind, and guidance, and mercy for people who believe with certainty." (45:20; Talal Itani)

"Nay! those who disbelieve are in self-exaltation and opposition." (38:2, Mohammad Habib Shakir)

"Secret counsels are only the work of Satan that he may cause to grief to those who believe, and he cannot hurt them in the least except with Allah 's permission, and on Allah let the believers rely."
(58:10; Hamid S. Aziz)

"And there are also secret combinations, even as in times of old, according to the combinations of the devil, for he is the founder of all these things; yea, the founder of murder, and works of darkness; yea, and he leadeth them by the neck with a flaxen cord, until he bindeth them with his strong cords forever." (Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 26:22)

"And it shall come in a day when the blood of saints shall cry unto the Lord, because of secret combinations and the works of darkness."
(Mormon 8:27)

"And it came to pass that they formed a secret combination, even as they of old; which combination is most abominable and wicked above all, in the sight of God;" (Ether 8:18)

"Now the brother of Shared, whose name was Gilead, also received great strength to his army, because of secret combinations. (Ether 14:8)

Through control of economies, mass media, militaries, police, courts, churches, and schools, they have redefined both childhood and parenting to produce a population of self-absorbed individuals with unrealistic expectations of work and reward; destroyed marriage and the centrality of the family; corrupted justice; perverted dignity; sent untold numbers of innocents to prison; decimated the concepts of civil and human rights; produced mass unemployment, bouts of starvation, and anti-nutritious foodstuffs that cannot sustain life; convinced millions that religion and patriotism justify hatred and slaughter of foreign populations; perpetuated holocausts; and empowered a criminal class of murderous psychopathic liars hiding their true nature behind wealth, prestige, gated communities, happy faces, fun, luxury, leisure, illegitimate leadership, false accomplishments, phony credentials, and unearned immunity from investigation and prosecution.

Domestic police departments are key combat units of their military who ensure the system of injustice by breaking bones and breaking lives. Lawyers and judges are high-ranking officers in their militaries of oppression. They excuse away police crimes while assisting the police in framing effective leaders of political dissent for crimes they did not commit, or any random citizen who will suffice to be framed for crimes the police themselves have done, most notably child and adult abductions, rapes, and murders. Their mass media delivers life instructions to viewers, listeners, readers, and surfers. Their militaries - the ones that invade foreign countries and the ones under the disguise of "law enforcement" that wage war against citizens within their own nations - force populations to accept the programming.

"And our spirits must have become like unto him, and we become devils, angels to a devil, to be shut out from the presence of our God, and to remain with the father of lies, in misery, like unto himself; yea, to that being who beguiled our first parents, who transformeth himself nigh unto an angel of light, and stirreth up the children of men unto secret combinations of murder and all manner of secret works of darkness. (Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 9:9)

"And it came to pass on the other hand, that the Nephites did build them up and support them, beginning at the more wicked part of them, until they had overspread all the land of the Nephites, and had seduced the more part of the righteous until they had come down to believe in their works and partake of their spoils, and to join with them in their secret murders and combinations." (Helaman 6:38)

"And the regulations of the government were destroyed, because of the secret combination of the friends and kindreds of those who murdered the prophets." (3 Nephi 7:6)

The Illuminati Mafia

The Illuminati mafia is a comprehensive quasi-Satanist cult whose operatives have infiltrated the highest levels of political and economic power in America, Europe, and throughout the world. While many people find the existence of a centuries-old (generation to generation) worldwide organized crime syndicate hard to believe, the evidence of its existence now and through time is overwhelming despite that information about the Illuminati can be difficult to acquire due to the secret nature of the organization. However, researchers and activists have been aided by infiltrators loyal to the cause of exposing the organization, some leaders who purposefully routinely betray the organization (see "Dual Roles of the Anti-Christ" chapter), and some once loyal to the organization who have repented and now act as informants to gather and distribute information to others while pretending to still be loyal. In some cases, researchers and activists have gained information and insight from personal experience as targeted victims of persecution by organized crime operatives.

Volumes of books and documentary videos about the Illuminati have been produced by other scholars, activists, journalists, and educators. This book presents only summary information. For those who want more detailed information on Illuminati history, culture, beliefs, rituals, structure, and membership, the reference section includes referral to some more detailed works by other authors though many more could be cited. A word of caution is given that along with useful accurate information, many of these documents also present bits and pieces of misinformation about the Illuminati mafia (for example, wrongly tracing its roots to a Bavarian organization that formed and disbanded in 1776). Some also tend to have a sensationalist focus on the Satanist cult aspect of the organization that is not well explained while not using the term "organized crime."

In general (and with exceptions), documents presented from academic research perspectives tend to be more factual than speculative and tend to focus more on the Illuminati role in controlling political dialogue, political systems, and the economy, creating and promoting programs of racism, caste, and genocide, and in engineering wars, other disasters, sectarian conflicts, and gossip and scandal distractions from political dialogue rather than focusing on cult rituals. The Illuminati are too often spoken of in sensationalist context as a Satanist cult and are not spoken of often enough in political-economic context as an organized crime syndicate.

Though some of his belief and theory may be esoteric (knowledge understood only by a select few) and eccentric (out of the ordinary), British scholar and activist David Icke presents some of the best comprehensive information to understand how the Illuminati manipulate us through many forms of psychological warfare within the mass media. American independent journalist-activist Alex Jones has done some of the best contemporary investigation and collection of specific detailed information related to the Illuminati's control of politics, the economy, and information. Both Icke and Jones have cultivated a number of high-level informants over the years. Jones has developed a team of journalists who carefully read government action and statement for evidence of corruption and to identify what plans and policies are being formulated and implemented through government authority and use of public funds.

Puppets and Puppet Masters

Some observers understand the Illuminati to be only a subset of the much larger organized crime syndicate under Illuminati control. They are the elite group at the top of a larger elitist organization that seeks to illegitimately control all other humans for benefits to them of power gratification, social status (even if only among none but other illuminates), and the luxuries of wealth. In that definition, Illuminati refers to the most powerful and wealthy members of a mega crime organization that exists through a matrix of smaller crime organizations that have independent operations but also work together toward common goals, similar to how labor union locals have independent operations yet also work for goals of a larger parent organization.

Another understanding of Illuminati refers not only to the elite group of individuals at the top of the power structure of the organized crime matrix, but also to the entire membership and any affiliated operatives of all of the smaller crime syndicates that serve as local arms of the larger organization. In this larger definition, the Illuminati are not just a few dozen or even a few hundred or few thousand of the most powerful and wealthy individuals and families in the world, but are also all operatives of a conglomeration of crime syndicates controlling political and economic systems at all levels of society (city, county, state, prefecture, province, national, and international) throughout most of the world.

The Kennedy and Eisenhower warnings tell us who and what the Illuminati are in most basic terms – a cult, a secret society, with plans to take over American government to destroy our way of life and institute great tyranny in America and throughout the world. A "monolithic conspiracy," they organize at local, regional, national, and international levels. Again, much like labor unions, the foundation or base of the crime syndicate exists in organizations with independent local memberships and operations that also work for coordinated national and international goals. The Illuminati even employ local numbers similar to labor unions, the most famous being the 322 assigned to the Illuminati local “Skull and Bones” club at Yale University.

The most frightening aspect of the Illuminati is that they are not an insignificant Satanist cult nor a small number of wayward people without power following a false prophet. Illuminati puppets controlled by super wealthy puppet masters are in control of our governments at local, regional, national, and international levels. In the American context at the national level, they are recognized as people such as Henry Kissinger, Donald Rumsfeld, Karl Rove, Dick Cheney, George H.W. Bush, Bill Clinton, Hilary Clinton, John Kerry, Barack Obama, Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, Harry Truman, and other past presidents and many of their cabinet members and appointees, Supreme Court justices, department heads and directors of various federal agencies, and numerous members of Congress. They are recognized as the people through the decades and to this day who conspire to deliver domestic and foreign economic, political, social, ecological, and military policy that serves the interests of a wealthy elite rather than the interests of justice, livelihood, liberty, health, and overall well-being of the common citizen.

The Illuminati puppet masters – wealthy individuals and families often operating behind mega-corporations they control - control the corrupt government officials through various forms of bribery: providing the greater amount of funding for their campaigns, providing income (some hidden, some not) in addition to their public salaries, and providing leisurely and lucrative employment positions once no longer in office. While the puppets are in office, the puppet masters dictate their behavior, determining for example not just how the officials will vote on legislation, but even what legislation will be allowed to be considered versus what will be suppressed and never presented to the full legislature and the public as viable options.

This is organized crime as insurrection: high-ranking government officials and their staff members are being paid unreported income in secret by extremely wealthy people in order to control legislation and policy. At the highest levels, these crimes to suppress the democratic process become crimes against humanity as militaries, police, and other government agencies are misused to kill, kidnap, falsely imprison, displace, and dispossess people of their homes and land holdings and other resources that are then put under ownership and control of the already super- or über-wealthy.

The Illuminati are in the military, holding many medium and high-ranking officer positions. They are in intelligence agencies, law enforcement, and other investigative and regulatory bodies - in American context, within the Central Intelligence Agency, National Security Agency, Department of Homeland Security, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, Drug Enforcement Agency, Border Patrol, U.S. Customs Service, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, Transportation Safety Administration, Federal Aviation Authority, Food and Drug Administration, Centers for Disease Control, Department of Energy, Department of Ecology, Department of Housing and Urban Development,

Bureau of Indian Affairs, and the larger Department of the Interior, among other agencies. Most of these agencies have charters for legitimate work for our nation, but their policies and programs are routinely co-opted to serve wealthy criminals instead of the common good.

The Illuminati established and maintain control of the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, the World Trade Organization, the Tri-Lateral Commission, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the United Nations (but not necessarily all U.N. Delegates, employees, or programs), the United Nations Security Council, the Council on Foreign Relations, and many other ultra-powerful economic and policy-influencing or determining institutions, whether governmental, quasi-governmental, or even to include private associations such as “the Bilderberg group,” a collection of some of the world’s most powerful and influential political (in and outside of government) and economic figures who meet once a year to discuss certain political and economic goals they for some cause have in common. The Illuminati established and control the privately-owned Federal Reserve Bank in the United States that controls much of the world’s economy via manipulation of the American economy.

The Illuminati are also sometimes called “the international Zionist conspiracy,” an unfortunate label that disparages the Bible and Book of Mormon concept of Zion. The term is used because of the enormous influence Illuminati acting under the guise of “the pro-Israeli lobby” exert over politicians and governments, particularly of the United States and western Europe, and for how much foreign policy of these nations appears to be designed to protect the interests and expansion of the modern nation-state called Israel against the interests and territory of Palestinians who are the remnant descendants of the true Israelis led out of Egypt by Moses. This expansion also has already and appears to ultimately intend to intrude upon the territory of Israel's predominantly Muslim neighbors in North Africa, Arabia, and the Middle East where a large percentage of the world's known and accessible crude oil reserves are located. "New World Order" is a phrase used routinely by Illuminati operatives as code for development of a dictatorial world government under their control, ostensibly with its headquarters in Jerusalem. Illuminati may misuse and corrupt the concept of Zion in their schemes and plots, but the true concept of Zion has no connection to the Illuminati mafia but is the kingdom of God to be setup on the earth during the Elijah era (Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 26:29-32) to occur after the Illuminati fall from power.

Illuminati are the ineffectual elected leaders of democracies chosen through media manipulation of the public and election fraud and theft, dictators in non-democratic nations, private bankers, CEOs, corporate boards, and top stock holders of multi-national corporations, policy makers, business leaders, think-tank and other policy analysts and media pundits, some journalists, intelligence agents, military commanders, and more. They are elitists, criminals, psychopaths, and excellent actors in the highest positions of power and influence all over the world. They are the people who get rich by making others poor, either by direct intake of legitimate and illegitimately-gained profits or by various forms of payouts (for example, bribes, business contracts, and rigged gambling wins) from others wealthier and higher in the Illuminati power structure. They are the people who kill to be wealthy and those who kill to be paid by the wealthy.

The Pill of Truth

If the government and corporate media were able to keep control of information, it might take many more years for the 9/11 truth movement to accomplish what it has accomplished in less than 15 years after the terrorism strikes of September 11, 2001. The 9/11 truth movement is a perpetually-growing activist movement begun by family and coworkers of those murdered in the 9/11 terrorist attacks. Largely locked out and ignored by the corporate news media, it has relied upon the commitment of its membership, grassroots word-of-mouth politics, and the Internet for its organization and growth. Various scholars, scientists, activists and organizations in the movement challenge the American government and corporate media explanation of what happened on 9/11/01 by pointing to various bits of evidence that do not fit that explanation (see the "Conspiracy" chapter). While this challenge to the government's story carries an implicit questioning of who was responsible for the terrorism that day, some remain publicly conservative in accusations of conspiracy, asking only that a new investigation be done to truthfully explain how the World Trade Center towers and Building 7 were brought down on 9/11. They take this conservative position knowing that a truthful investigation will uncover many clues to identify the true culprits. Some others are not as conservative but openly point to various pieces of evidence that already identifies members of the American government, military, mass media, and economic elite among the true culprits.

One of many 9/11 truth websites, The911Hoax.us draws together various bits of information that together document an unfathomable act of murderous treason carried out by conspirators that include dozens of Americans. They planned, carried out, and have unsuccessfully tried to conceal their responsibility for acts of terrorism that they blamed on others (what is called “false-flag terrorism”) not to drum up public support for just one war, but for what they hope will be a string of wars for total worldwide economic domination and enslavement under their insatiable lust for power and wealth.

The evidence presented through a number of linked video documents suggests a security firm partly owned by Jeb Bush - brother and son of former presidents (his father also once director of the CIA) - and under contract to provide security for the World Trade Center was responsible for a lapse in security in which security personnel, construction workers, and/or others placed demolition charges and nano-thermite throughout the three World Trade Center buildings that were then destroyed in controlled demolitions with a great loss of life on September 11, 2001. By visual inspection, forensic evidence, circumstantial evidence, and witness testimony, the destruction appears to have been by preplanned controlled demolitions rather than collapses due to fire of burning jet fuel, office furniture, and building materials that do not reach temperatures hot enough to melt the thick metal beams used as the structural supports to hold up tall buildings.

The 9/11 Hoax is bolstered by TheBinLadenHoax.us which presents a much briefer, though just as shocking argument - supported by compelling visual evidence - that Barack Hussein Obama is not only a politician, but also an actor who played the role of Osama bin Laden in propaganda films produced and released by an Illuminati-controlled American government both before and during the first few years of his presidency. This shocking evidence in turn is evidence that members of both major political parties in the United States were involved in the 9/11 terrorism and cover-up and that Obama was hand-picked by the Illuminati to be the next president after George W. Bush. The site also implicitly discloses at least one reason the U.S. government faked the death of bin Laden: so that Obama would not be called upon again to set aside presidential duties to make time to star in propaganda films to lie to and fool the American public. The combined evidence linked or presented on both sites suggests the conspirators behind 9/11 are part of a long-standing elite criminal organization that has followed the control of one presidential administration with the control of another.

"The 9/11 Hoax" narrative corrects this author's own prior acceptance of numerous lies told by government, mass media, and some scholars not only about who was responsible for the terrorism of 9/11 and several previous acts of terrorism around the world, but also about scientific facts of 9/11. Learning the information presented in "The 9/11 Hoax" and "The Bin Laden Hoax" is important foundation for understanding further discussion of the Illuminati mafia in this book. It is akin to taking the red pill in the fictional movie, *The Matrix*. When Neo, the hero-to-be, takes the pill, like others before him he is given the cure for the illness of believing a false reality. After discovering the truth of his enslavement to a group of tyrants who deny humans any purpose in life except to serve them, he then works with those who rescued him from the false reality to liberate the rest of humanity.

When an American citizen learns and accepts reality that jihadist Muslim terrorists did not commit the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, but that members of the American government, military, and intelligence agencies working on behalf of a gang of wealth-mongering criminals planned and carried out the attacks and coverup of their responsibility, the citizen painfully leaves behind a false perception of reality. It is not just the official story of 9/11 that comes into question, but suddenly everything government says and does raises doubt, suspicion, and alarm. Mass media is questioned on its motives and intentions. Corporate executives, oil tycoons, and bankers are seen in a new light. Spurred to education and activism, the citizen scrutinizes, questions, researches, and seeks. In doing so, the citizen uncovers the information that provides the realization that nearly everything he believed about how the world works is a lie and that a group of wealth-mongering tyrants has him and the rest of humanity ensnared in a web of deception.

The Masonic Connection

Before the conspirators came to be commonly known as the Illuminati, rumors and research about the Freemasons (or Masons, a fraternal order ostensibly originating in the United Kingdom about 600 years ago but with locals now across North America and Europe) speaks of people involved in strange cult rituals and conspiracies to control economics and politics in their communities and at larger levels. The Masons allegedly serve as a key front organization the Illuminati uses in organizing comprehensive local crime syndicates to secretly rule communities and governments. Masons often claim to be Christians and Jews but are long-rumored to be Satanists who partake in cult rituals and offer prayer to wooden owl statues.

The Masons have come under public scrutiny before in American and European history, at one point being falsely blamed for instigating the French revolution. In History of Bigotry in the United States, Gustavus Myers reported from his research that membership of the French lodges prior to the revolution was composed of “beneficiaries of the older order,” described as “nobles, officials, rich men,” and priests and that many of them left France during the revolution.

Myers also wrote about the persecution and disappearance of William Morgan in New York state in 1826 after Morgan wrote a book and began giving lectures about the Masons. While the Governor, a Mason himself, was offering reward for those who had abducted and apparently murdered Morgan, local newspapers across the state were filled with speculation and accusation against the Masons, resulting in public concern against them. The fervor over Morgan's disappearance was bolstered by Lebbeus Armstrong, a Presbyterian minister who was expelled by the Masons and then published a pamphlet against them in which he said he was convinced “the whole system of Masonry belongs to the power of darkness,” that the goal of Masonry was to “subvert the moral government of God,” that Masonry would be “incontestably proved to be the Man of Sin” [“the man of lawlessness”], and that the prophecy of their overthrow “predicted by St. Paul” was underway. His outburst against the Masons after his expulsion is evidence that some Masons do not know their lodges are connected to a quasi-Satanist cult involved in organized crime in their towns and around the world. At what point before his expulsion it became known to Armstrong is unknown.

Other writings by other authors, including a monthly anti-Mason magazine, followed Armstrong's pamphlet, and anti-Masonic citizen councils formed. By early 1829, the pressure against them was enough that leading Masons in the west part of New York state encouraged disbanding their chapters and lodges. More weekly and monthly anti-Masonic periodicals appeared in New York and spread to neighboring and nearby states. Eventually, an anti-Masonic political party came into being and Mason lodges also began to disband in other states.

Myers noted that the anti-Masonic movement suddenly and somewhat mysteriously vanished in the mid-1830s when the Anti-Masons merged with the Whig party. However, he did not suggest that the anti-Masons may have been infiltrated by Masons who gained leadership as anti-Mason in order to mislead to suppress the movement. Myers' historical account also does not overtly suggest the anti-Masonic movement was distilled by the Masons taking a low profile and in forming another secret organization in 1852 – calling itself the Grand Council of the United States of North America - as a front organization for the Masons. Enough description is given, however, that this can be discerned. The members of the new organization became known to the public as “Know Nothings” because their consistent answer to questions about the secret organization they had joined was they knew nothing. By 1854, only two years after its formation, in one state alone (Pennsylvania) the secret order of Know Nothings claimed 635 lodges with 110,000 members. Operating through the American Party formed in 1854 and in the 1854 elections, the Know Nothings won nine state governor positions, numerous seats in state legislatures, eight spots in the United States Senate, and 104 in the House of Representatives. Also drawing attention away from the Masons was Know Nothing-led persecution of Catholics, Irish Catholics in particular, in some cases inciting riots and mob violence against Irish immigrants.

With the advent of the Civil War and the restructuring of the American two-party political system, the Know Nothings faded into history, but the Masons have not. Published in 1943, Myers' book noted that in 1939, the United States had 15,518 Mason lodges with a membership of more than 2.4 million. As of 2012, the Masons claimed 1.5 million members in the United States.

Outside the realm of Myers' book is mass media history. Another reason the anti-Masonic movement dissipated and disappeared from public view (an underground or subculture anti-Masonic movement continued, resulting in still-surviving and now thriving rumors, folklore, urban legends, books, videos, and other research material) was an orchestrated change in the character of newspapers. Cities and towns across America once had a number of small competing publications each with allegiance to one set of political ideas or another (or to one political party or another). Politically-minded papers began to disappear in the mid-1800s, bought out or run out of business through both a lower purchase price and cheaper advertising rates of the corporate chain newspapers that replaced them and through which control of content came under an increasingly smaller number of publishers. That content also changed dramatically from promoting citizen political involvement to promoting interest in sensationalistic stories of urban crime and violence. The “penny press” still railed against graft and corruption in rhetorical editorials but without providing any leadership for action, much like today's corporate mass media that has evolved from it.

Just as it would be wrong to assume the Masons are the only Illuminati front organization, it would also be wrong to assume that all members of Mason lodges or any other front organizations are part of the Illuminati. Front organizations are likely to have members who know nothing about a secret group operating within their organizations nor that group's connections to organized crime at local or larger levels. Such people are allowed, even invited, into front organizations for specific reasons: for the secret group within the organization to befriend enemies of organized crime to spy on them and to lure them into indiscretion traps to face personal and public ruin if they will not come under mafia control; to discover through observation and tests over time additional people of weak character to invite into organized crime operations; and to use the ruse of trusted friendship for easier access to ways to frame innocent people. Every Illuminati local may have ready a number of Masons and/or members of other front groups whom they will sacrifice - framing them - if and when the public pressure and scrutiny of the organizations becomes too great and they must perform a phoney purge of undesirables and arrests must occur to appease the public.

In addition to forming numerous front organizations of their own, the Illuminati also routinely infiltrate, co-opt, and corrupt organizations formed by others, including once vibrant opposition groups. Once effectively infiltrated so that infiltrators rise to leadership positions such groups often then evolve into apologists for injustice.

Electoral College and Election Rigging

The Illuminati employ a number of tactics to control the outcome of ostensibly democratic elections not only in the United States but also in nations throughout the world. Due to the wealth, strategic and economic allies, and the enormous resources the United States can harness for action toward a cause, the American presidency is considered the most powerful political position in the world. This power of the executive of the American government is vested not only in ability to sign or veto legislation and to suggest legislation, but also in being the nation's chief law enforcement officer, chief military officer, and the only individual person in the world who can simply over-ride anything in American law and policy with an executive order. President Franklin D. Roosevelt overrode civil and economic rights of more than 122,000 Japanese Americans (nearly 70,000 of whom held American citizenship) living along the west coast of the United States who were forced into relocation camps for the duration of World War II by an executive order issued in February 1942. Executive orders have been used by presidents for many other reasons, but the Japanese American interment demonstrates how far-reaching presidential power can be to intrude upon the lives of ordinary people.

To fill this powerful position every four years, an enormous amount of money, labor, and other resources - including the resource of public dialogue played out through the mass media for resolving conflict and finding real solutions to problems and concerns - is expended over a two-year or longer period of electioneering and campaigning to win "the popular vote." When election day arrives every four years, the television and now internet media present hours upon hours of continually updated news coverage about the popular vote and how the popular vote will determine the Electoral College votes that actually decide the presidency. What is presented is a lie. By the Constitution of the United States of America, the popular vote has no legal bearing on how the Electoral College votes.

By the Constitution of the United States, the Electoral College is mandated to be an extremely small group of people whose selection is governed by whims of state legislatures. The federal government itself tells us:

"Electors are often chosen to recognize service and dedication to their political party. They may be State-elected officials, party leaders, or persons who have a personal or political affiliation with the Presidential candidate." ("Who are the Electors?," Federal Register)

The Electors choose the President and Vice President of the United States through an internal election process that is not bound to a popular vote, but even within the government-published information about the Electoral College is misinformation that a popular vote determines the Electoral College. The Electoral College is determined in each state by a process of that state legislature's choosing. A state's laws may or may not allow popular vote of members of the Electoral College. The official government information does include that even a popular vote of Electors does not bind the Electors to follow a popular vote for choosing the president except in "some states" where Electors are required by law to "cast their votes according to the popular vote." Some other states have provisions that Electors must vote as they pledged to vote when they were selected as Electors but those pledges are to vote by their political party affiliation. The information readily available in the Federal Register does not say how many states require Electors to follow the popular vote but from the information that is presented, it appears to be less than 20 of 50 states plus the District of Columbia. The election of the President of the United States of America is not an exercise in popular democracy but is an exercise of deception against the public to keep selection of the President of the United States of America within the confines of an elite group chosen through a whimsical process of the power elite.

After the presidential election in 2000, Americans and the world observing witnessed the aftermath of an enormous election-rigging operation that disenfranchised tens of thousands of people (mostly but not exclusively African Americans who by voting trends would have cast the majority of their votes for Democratic candidate Al Gore ) in the state of Florida so that a popular vote could be produced to match how the Electoral College would vote in its election that actually chooses the President. The evidence the Electoral College, as well as most candidates and the corporate mass media, is now and has historically been controlled by the Illuminati is in the existence of the charade of the popular vote allegedly determining how Electoral College votes are cast. If the Electoral College were not controlled by Illuminati mafia, this charade of a popular vote would not occur at all. The false belief that the popular vote determines the Electoral College vote is presented even within alternative mass media and by well-known dissident voices.

Of course controlling the office of President is not the only electoral goal of the Illuminati mafia. The documentary American Blackout, which examines the voting fraud of the Florida election in 2000 also documents how Illuminati puppets orchestrated a targeted removal of a dissident member of the United States Congress through manipulation of legal voting and candidate election procedures. Voting fraud to control positions at various levels of government has a documented history within the United States. Election rigging is carried out through a number of methods including now the manipulation of electronic voting machines.

Assassinations and MKULTRA

As can be expected, the Illuminati also sponsor political assassinations in order to control government and the larger political environment. Official stories are questioned and conspiracy theories remain regarding the assassinations of several political figures including American President John F. Kennedy in 1963, his brother Robert in 1968, and his son John F. Kennedy Jr. in 1999, as well as American civil rights leaders Malcolm X in 1964 and Martin Luther King Jr. in 1968, the Philippines' Benigno Aquino in 1983, Britain's Princess Diana and Doty Fayed in 1997 (Diana was ostensibly about to make public announcement of her engagement to Fayed, a wealthy Muslim, and possibly also a pregnancy) in 1997, and four members of Pakistan's Bhutto family in 1979, 1985, 1996, and 2007 among a number of other murders and alleged accidental deaths. Many of these murders were carried out by paid assassins, but some may have been carried out by assassins both unwilling and unpaid.

Research on the Central Intelligence Agency's MKULTRA mind-control program says the CIA began this heinous experimentation on subjects in 1949. Though allegedly stopped some years later, many believe the program never ceased and still continues to operate under covert funding. It is believed to be parent to affiliated projects meant to unleash mass violence on the American public in an effort to convince Americans to abdicate their 2nd Amendment gun-ownership rights. Doing so would leave Americans defenseless against an increasingly tyrannical government backed by Illuminati-trained and loyal police officers and soldiers or their robotic replacements (in advanced development and near deployment stage) that will not question nor defy orders nor defect to defend the citizenry unless hacking and tampering of their computerized programming occurs.

The MKULTRA program involves use of psychotropic drugs, hypnosis, physical and psychological abuse, and repetitive messages both direct while under hypnosis and direct, obscured, and subliminal at other times. The minds of MKULTRA subjects are assaulted with immense negative stress to break down moral barriers to violence and any self-determination-resistance to subconscious programming aimed against the person while under hypnosis and at other times through subliminal images, sound, and text. The minds of subjects are programmed toward violence at either specific or random targets through repeated messages of hate or some other justification for why that person or people should be killed. Subjects advanced far enough in the programming are sent out armed while under hypnosis with instructions to find and murder their targets. The program is believed to have produced a number of assassins and would-be assassins, including Izola Curry, an African American woman who stabbed Martin Luther King Jr. in the chest at a book-signing event in Harlem New York in September 1958.

MKULTRA subjects most likely also include Sirhan Sirhan who is alleged to have fired the gunshots that killed Robert Kennedy during Kennedy's run for president of the United States in 1968. Evidence indicates Sirhan did not fire the shots that killed Kennedy but that a second gunman did. Sirhan made statements in early years after the assassination about his admiration for the man he is accused of killing, while also denying that written statements suggesting killing Kennedy were truly his and indicating that while he had memory of some events of that evening, he could not remember the shooting. Speaking in a news interview years later, Sirhan displayed a sense of humor (asking the news crew to strike a comment he made about his gun and calling his day at the firing range a good NRA get together), admitted he had some type of mental issue at the time (that he was in a "disassociated state"), denied his diary writings indicated will and intent to kill Kennedy, still easily recalled specific details of his day and evening the day of the shooting, and seemed reluctantly convinced that he killed Kennedy though indicated he still had no memory of the shooting. Sirhan recalled a witness to the evening who reported seeing him in a dazed state with "glassy eyes" as if he were sleeping.

An eyewitness to events following the assassination of Malcolm X described in recollection years later the condition of the alleged assassin who was assaulted by other people in the crowd immediately after the shooting:

"He was running out, still had the gun in his hand, and a bunch of people were kicking him and knocking him 'til they finally knocked him down. And they just, they were kicking him all in the chest and face and everything. And as I remember him, he looked like a zombie; his eyes were bulging like he was either high on something or he'd been hypnotized. I don't know what was wrong with him but he just looked like a zombie. He never let out a sound. And they were about to kick his chest in. There was no outcry of pain or anything. He looked like a robot." (Like It Is - The Covert War Against Malcolm X)

In more recent years, Jared Loughner, who shot and killed a federal judge and a nine-year-old girl who happened to be born on September 11, 2001 along with four other people while trying to assassinate Arizona Congresswoman Gabrielle Giffords in January 2011, made stressed statements online before the shooting spree about government mind control and denial of his civil rights in connection to mind control:

"I can't trust the current government because of fabrications. The government is implying mind control and brainwash on the people by controlling grammar."

"I know who's listening: Government Officials, and the People. Nearly all the people, who don't know this accurate information of a new currency, aren't aware of mind control and brainwash methods. If I have my civil rights, then this message wouldn't have happen."

Loughner was allegedly obsessed with hatred for Giffords, yet he shot at least 20 other random people in the crowd around Giffords which may indicate he was having trouble locating and identifying his target. Is something in Giffords politics a problem for her Illuminati colleagues in Congress? Was she planning to speak out against them or defy them in some other way? One observer notes an inexplicable delay in the arrival of police and emergency medical treatment to the shooting scene and suggests Giffords was not the only nor the primary target of assassination but that John Roll, the federal judge killed that day was.

Programming Mass Violence

Some evidence exists that mind control experimentation has been unleashed upon the general public in recent years. The term "going postal" to mean a loss of emotional control to the extent of rampage violence was introduced in the mid-1980s when a string of rampage shootings by employees of the United States Postal Service occurred. Since that time, a number of mass shootings have occurred at K-12 schools, college campuses, and other work places. It is difficult to seriously argue that postal employees have more stressful jobs than others and that even the boring nature of their jobs would cause the rash of incidents involving them. Conspiracy speculation would suggest exposure to sources of subliminal programming at their work places as a possible explanation. Students and teachers may also be subjected to sources of subliminal programming as may employees and customers at various work places. Coincidence that some shooters were receiving mental health counseling suggests possible anti-social programming while under hypnosis.

A number of children drowned by their own mothers in very recent years suggests possible experimentation targeted at breaking the bonds of love and emotional attachment between family members to induce family violence. This could be further manipulated to induce violence by family members at political dissidents or by the dissidents against their families. News stories about more than one of the drowning incidents carry overt or implicit suggestions of possible subliminal and/or hypnosis programming to induce this violence:

Mom says voices told her to drown children
Houston mom drowns three sons
Dallas mom attempts to drown children
St. Paul mom drowns daughter
California mom drowns son
Long Island mom drowns children
Mom tries to drown her teenage children
Florida mom tries to drown son
Air Force mom tries to drown child
Oregon mom drowns daughter, teenager helps
Australian mom drowns daughter
Florida mom drowns baby
Mom drugs then drowns teenagers
Alberta mom drowns two sons
Davis mom drowns child
Wealthy mom drowns child
Anchorage mom tries to drown daughter
Cincinnati mom tries to drown child
Alabama mom drowns eight-year-old son
Winnipeg mom suspect in children's drowning
Mom attempts to drown children in Daytona
British mom drowns daughter
Edmonton mom drowns son

These stories and others not included contain similarities: most of the children were drowned in bathtubs, many of the mothers themselves called law enforcement authorities, and most of the women readily admitted to killing their children. All of these killings and attempted killings may have been induced by current and ongoing government experimentation aimed at altering individual's mental processing to implant foreign ideas and influence action. As civil libertarians warned would occur, alleged concern over Islamic extremism is being used as excuse to secure public funding for these programs in which attempt is made to hide their true nature and agenda behind propaganda and lies against Muslims and others.

Direct, Obscured, Subliminal

As their name implies, direct messages are direct and overt in nature. “Vote for Me” is a direct message. It contains no hidden or alternate meanings and conveys nothing more than a direct action the candidate wants citizens to undertake. This type of message holds no manipulative or hypnotic power. However, direct messages can be and often are crafted to manipulate the audience on conscious and subconscious levels. For one of many examples, beer advertisements during televised sporting events that feature average-looking and not particularly athletic men laughing and smiling while drinking beer and while surrounded by scantily-clad beautiful women who seem to adore them deliver conscious and subconscious messages. The direct conscious-level manipulative message is, “drinking our beer helps you have fun and appear manly in the eyes of women.” A subconscious message might be “beautiful women love men who have fun by spending their income on sports and alcohol with their friends.”

Subconscious impact of these types of advertisements is an association in the mind of the male sports viewer of sports with sex and alcohol. This can increase testosterone and adrenalin production in male sports fans when viewing their favorite sports or engaged in other fan activity (participating in fantasy sports leagues or reading news sports stories, for examples). This in turn increases the likelihood of both male aggression and sexual transgressions at the same time the subconscious is directing these males to consume alcohol to satisfy a false subconscious belief that this will help them in the pursuit of women. Images of nearly-naked cheerleaders prancing around the sidelines during college and professional sporting contests reinforces the sports-sex-alcohol triad. The ads and under-dressed cheerleaders affect not only the adult male mind, but train the minds of young males to associate sports with sex and alcohol and train both males and females in the objectification of women. Young male viewers are trained to expect females to dress and behave as the sideline cheerleaders do, while young female viewers are trained to accept and participate in their own objectification through copying the dress and behavior.

By association of alcohol with sex and sports, it is linked in the subconscious mind to two primal drives of the male id that are both fueled by testosterone and adrenaline production. Through this direct-message training while growing up as sports fans, male minds come to falsely believe on at least a subconscious level that the body's biological needs for physical activity in general and for sexual activity specifically can be satisfied through alcohol consumption. This also increases the likelihood of sexual transgressions by males while intoxicated. As well, many relationships and families are ruined before some men come to realize alcohol is not their friend and cannot satisfy their primal needs for physical and sexual activity nor does it assist in satisfying the primal need of belonging to a properly-functioning family unit.

Obscured messages are those that are not immediately visible in an image or within text but can be found upon more careful inspection. For example, the Muslim Brother flag of a clinched white fist super-imposed on a black banner at first glance appears to only communicate the general idea of “power” to change the circumstances of society for the better for whatever group the fist is being held up to represent. On closer inspection, however, two obscured messages emerge.

“The Fist of Christ” message is found in seeing the dark parts of the wrist and arm as a nail hole in Christ's wrist and seeing either blood or the ripping of his skin and flesh extending slightly up his forearm in one direction and to the center of his palm in the other direction.

The second obscured message is the “March of the Devils” image. The image is not the Devil himself, but one link from a chain of his followers. Depicted is a human soul yolked by some type of horned covering over his head and face that attaches to a heavy chain that pulls his face toward the ground so that he must walk with his legs extended apart in an awkward position to keep his balance as his feet shuffle forward as he is pulled along by the chain. The chain in front of him extends to another soul along the chain. His arms are pulled back and bound behind him in a straight-jacket-type garment which is also attached to a chain in the rear that has a weight upon it so that he must drag the weight as he moves along. After the weight, the chain extends to the next soul behind him. This is a depiction of the march into hell on Judgment Day: “they . . . will have iron chains tying their hands to their necks” (13:5; Shakir translation), be bound together in fetters, (14:49, Pickthall translation), and forced to march in a chain, sent into a blazing fire, and with nothing to eat but “the filth from washing of wounds” (69:25-37).

In text and speech, obscured messages occur by use of language in a type of secret code so that ideas are suggested that are not directly related to the surface-level discussion. In everyday language this is called “reading between the lines.” For example, a well-known American political or religious leader wishing to give warning about an impending extra-terrestrial attack upon earth without appearing to state overt belief in extra-terrestrials (in order to avoid over-hyped media attacks that would follow such a statement) might instead try to deliver the warning by appealing to a more general need to always be prepared for disaster and calamity. Though alluding to riots, fires, floods, earthquakes, tornadoes, tsunamis, and landslides as potential disasters, he draws upon a linkage in the mind of his audience between the idea of extra-terrestrial attack and the film Independence Day by suggesting July 4 as a target date for those with ability to do so to have stocked a two-year supply of food, water, and other essentials to prepare for any possible coming calamity. As time goes by, he makes repeated statements that while Independence Day is the target date for completing preparations, certainly there is no need to wait until Independence Day because calamity could strike sooner. On numerous occasions he repeats association of the words "Independence Day" - sometimes carefully and slowly with obvious emphasis placed on those word - with potential for coming calamity. The portion of the public that believes extra-terrestrials do or possibly exist might read between the lines to interpret a warning about an impending alien attack. The portion of the audience that does not believe in such things can either ignore the obscured message about aliens or deride the person for that aspect of the message while either choosing to ignore or heed the logic of the surface-level message to be prepared for any potential calamity.

Subliminal messages are further below the surface than even obscured messages. Subliminal messaging works by implanting thoughts in a person's subconscious via use of hidden sounds and images (including text). Scientific research demonstrates subliminal messages planted in the subconscious do affect conscious thought and in many cases resulting behaviors. The conscious mind cannot detect subliminals but they are heard or seen and stored among memories in the subconscious. In recorded music and speech for example, messages are inserted at a miniscule volume so that the conscious mind cannot perceive them while it is processing the easily-heard surface-level messages. Yet they are still carried by sound waves into the ear and into the subconscious part of the mind. Visual subliminals (which may include text-based messages) are fraction-of-a-second images appearing on video screens (movie theaters, televisions, computer monitors, and so forth) that like sound subliminals are not perceived by the conscious but are taken into the subconscious.

Subliminal sound and visuals are not immediately processed by the conscious mind to recognize what has been seen or heard as the conscious mind is instead busy processing the direct and sometimes obscured messages received above the subliminals. That leaves unprocessed ideas in the mind to be drawn into conscious thought at random or when triggered by an associated message, thought, or other stimulus. For example, a person receiving subliminal messages of hatred directed toward a certain ethnic group might not have much contact with members of that group and might not experience immediate negative thoughts about that group after having received the subliminals. However, coming into contact with members of that group at a later time, he might experience what seems to him to be a natural dislike for members of that group which in his mind is justified by some aspect of that group's cultural behavior or other attributes which he has not given any actual consideration to but instead is merely following what he has been unknowingly programmed to believe and to feel.

Research has determined subliminal messages received in the subconscious do affect conscious thought, feelings and behavior. Some of the best reviews and summaries of scientific research on the mechanisms and success of hypnosis and subliminal messaging is presented by businesses that specialize in selling hypnosis and subliminal messages as ways to help people stop smoking or lose other addictions, lose weight, eat healthy, overcome fears and anxieties, improve academic performance, improve sexual performance, and/or achieve economic and personal success through improved self-esteem and confidence. Ostensibly, subliminal messages have some positive uses. For example they have been used in “muzak” (recorded music heard overhead in department and grocery stores, shopping malls, airports, and other public spaces) to decrease shop-lifting and employee theft. They are used just as hypnosis is used as artificial ways to induce numerous types of self-improvement. However, people trusting subliminal messaging products are at the same risk as people put under hypnosis: they do not know what other messages might be planted in their minds while they have given control of their subconscious to others.

The Secret of *The Secret

The Secret, The Power, and The Magic are a set of books (and an initial movie that gave birth to the books) credited to Rhonda Byrne. On surface level, The Secret focuses upon “the law of attraction” and the “power of positive thinking” as the keys to receiving what you want at any given stage of your life. Both of these are actual religious principles, but are misrepresented in The Secret. The law of attraction as a religious principle is that rather than always being given what we want,

God will often instead give us what we need in order for us to learn valuable lessons and advance in our understanding and maturity. The Secret conflates the law of attraction with the principle of positive thinking to argue that if you think positive, you can have anything and everything you want, but if you think negative, then you will not get anything and you want. Though there is obviously correlation between attitudes and outcomes, the argument does not allow for God to give you what you need rather than what you want regardless of optimism, pessimism, skill, or level of confidence.

The Secret trilogy contains numerous religious references and correct teachings mixed with corruptions and promotion of false values. The trilogy's positive tone and joyful sales-talk do not end with promises that a person can have anything he or she wants in terms of good health, super wealth, magically happy relationships, and a perfect life, but makes a blatantly direct appeal to the temptation of power-lust by promising unlimited power over others and "the glory of the whole world." Byrne claims to have discovered this secret through research that led her to an ancient text called "The Emerald Tablet," dating to 3,000-5,000 BC, and allegedly buried near the pyramids of Giza before being unearthed in recent times.

Beginning in the film, The Secret begins to reveal what "the secret of The Secret" really is:

"The tenet of the film and book is that the universe is governed by a natural law called the law of attraction which is said to work by attracting into a person's life the experiences, situations, events, and people that 'match the frequency' of the person's thoughts and feelings."

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The\_Secret\_\(book\))

The key phrase in the above quote taken from the wikipedia entry on The Secret is “match the frequency of the person's thoughts and feelings.” The film includes discussion of obscured and subliminal messages hidden in media content to explain that what the subconscious part of our minds takes in has effect on our conscious feelings, desires, and behaviors.

The phrase presented by stringing the titles of the three books together, “the secret power magic” is what the trilogy is really about. While appearing to be about positive thinking to achieve success, the trilogy teaches those who know about “the secret of The Secret” how to control other people through a form of hypnosis achieved through use of direct, obscured, and subliminal messages.

According to content of The Secret, subliminal messages are placed in advertisements and other media products even though those doing so know it is wrong. Research indicates it is possible to successfully implant one-frame or fraction-of-a-second visual images in film that people cannot perceive seeing but that are read and stored by the subconscious. The research indicates messages can also be delivered by sound that a person does not perceive hearing but that is heard and stored by the subconscious. Advancement in home recording technology making it easier to find subliminal messages in video necessitated need to remove visual subliminals from television shows and advertisements. These messages may still be in movies shown at theaters but removed for home video and online streaming. Audio subliminal messages may be in recorded music, movies, television, video games, telephones, Internet, and other places.

General Assault Upon the Public

A program of subliminal messages delivered via movies, music, television, and internet sites may be used to further Illuminati goals by inducing:

- polarization based on political, religious, ethnic, economic, and cultural differences;
- lack of concern over wars, environmental destruction, political corruption, poverty and other social ills;
- support for elected officials and candidates who serve the super wealthy and not the common citizens;
- belief in government lies despite obvious aspects of dishonesty and coverup;
- denial of logic, reason, and evidence;
- self-harming behaviors such as cutting and also including suicide;
- anger and abusive behavior toward others in general or toward specific targets;
- lack of caring for and increased conflict with family members;

- depression, anxiety, and other mental health disorders;
- alcoholism and drug addictions;
- sexual promiscuity and objectification
- insatiable desire for shopping; and
- obsession with sports, movies, music, and television celebrities.

Just like advertising and other media products, subliminal messages can be directed toward target audiences. A film or web site that draws an audience from across the general population of America, for example, might have generalized messages aimed at all or large segments of the population such as “hate your neighbors,” “hate your kids,” “your parents hate you,” “nobody likes you,” “drink alcohol and take drugs,” “cutting yourself is fun,” “hate Jews,” “hate Muslims,” “hate black people,” “hate Mexicans,” “go shopping more,” “sports are more important than anything,” “worship celebrities,” “poor people are bad,” and “wealthy people are good.” A film or web site targeted toward an African American audience might have messages such as “hate white people” and “whites are all racist.” A film or Internet site likely to draw a politically conservative audience might have messages such as “socialists are evil,” “Democrats are dumb,” and “environmentalists are communists.” A film or site more likely to draw a politically progressive audience might have messages such as “Christians are crazy” and “Republicans are tyrants.” A film or site aimed at a Christian audience might have “all scientists believe in evolution,” “science is bad,” and “Islam is evil” messages. These are simplified message examples; in reality, these messages of hatred, division, and destruction are carefully crafted and are presented in far more creative textual, visual, and audio forms that manipulate by playing upon human fears, desires, and emotional affiliations.

The Science of Television

Attempt by the corrupt ruling class to turn members of the general public into mind-numbed brainwashed robotic automatons to obey the commands of the ruling class and their puppets is aided by the pervasiveness of television. The science of television works on two levels. On the obvious surface level, watching and listening to the content it presents opens a person to be influenced by the information contained within that content. On the not-obvious level is the science of television merged with science of the brain to create a much greater danger in which critical assessment and evaluation of the presented content does not occur:

"30 seconds after one starts watching TV, the brain automatically begins to produce alpha waves, a modified state of consciousness. The viewer goes into a trance-like mode, a type of light hypnosis. . . . In this semi-conscious state, they become highly susceptible to the messages contained in the programs, especially the commercials, which are created especially for that purpose."

(Personocrata, <http://www.wakingtimes.com/2014/02/26/brain-washing-social-control-programming-kill-your-television/>)

"'Beta' is considered a normal, awake state, while 'Alpha' waves are experienced in a deep relaxation or 'daydreaming' state. When in the Alpha state, a person is subjected to a passive learning experience with the right side of the brain at the wheel, leaving critical thinking skills behind. . . . TV effectively numbs the left side of your brain and renders you helpless to your right brain which is incapable of decoding and critically analyzing the information being presented to you.

The Illuminati Revealed

(Melton, <http://truthstreammedia.com/tv-your-mind-controlled/>)

The right side of the brain is responsible for processing of emotions. This means the corrupt can craft emotionally-laden messages that will induce strong emotional attachment to certain ideas and images without critical assessment of the ideas, images, or the attached emotions. Television holds enormous potential for manipulation of the audience through manipulation of emotions and other psychological knowledge.

Ego

In casual discourse of western society, power rewards are referred to as “ego strokes,” but in classical psychology it is “the id” that desires emotional satisfaction from the power to influence others or control situations. “The ego” helps the id rationalize desires and designs ways to satisfy them. The id is a secular term for a part of the conscious and subconscious that is key to our testing on earth to see if we will misuse power or if we will work to regulate behavior within moral boundaries. The “super ego” (also called “the conscience”) represents both learned and innate moral boundaries. It produces feelings of guilt if desires are satisfied in violation of its guidelines. For psychopaths, the super ego falls into “sleep mode” from repetitive over-ruling by the ego, our thought-processor that considers options and make decisions. Based on arguments the ego creates or adopts, it decides when and when not to follow guidelines of the super ego.

The ego has the key role in development and maintenance of psychopathology for it must develop arguments to repress or ignore feelings of regret, guilt, or remorse. Over time, the psychopath fails to feel these emotions at all due to the prior number of times such emotions have been repressed. We may equate the id to the voice of Satan tempting us, the super-ego to Holy Spirit guiding us, and ego to the human soul that must decide between the competing suggestions.

Ego and the Anti-Christ

The Illuminati follow a political ideology and ruling philosophy of everyday life of “social darwinism” that is not scientific but which the Anti-Christ fools his followers into believing is based in science. It is a eugenics argument that says some human beings are born innately better or more intelligent than others. In the system of the Anti-Christ, those identified as likely to accept such an argument are told that they are one of these people of superior intelligence and are invited to band together with others like them in various "poser" organizations that serve as fronts for the Illuminati.

In their pseudo-scientific argument, observations of animal behavior are the foundation for how they believe they are meant to behave as humans. Animals are seen as predators and conquerors of one another in a survival of the fittest quest for domination and control of resources necessary for survival. Therefore, and because in their argument God does not exist so no moral boundaries exist because Judgment Day does not exist, they believe humans are meant by their nature to be predatory against one another. Seeing themselves akin to dominant males or females in animal herds, the belief is they are stronger (by intelligence rather than physical strength) and therefore are rightfully dominant over other humans.

The argument fails as science on many levels, including the most surface that 1) predatory behavior is not normal within a species, 2) though a dominant may occur in a herd or pack, the dominant does not normally stockpile exorbitant wealth while depriving others in the pack of basic necessities of life, nor does the dominate order them into warfare to steal other herds' resources, 3) animals do not exploit or enslave each other neither singularly nor in conspiracy, and 4) predatory behavior by animals is done against other species lower on the food chain rather than against members of a same species and 5) the predatory behavior extends only to what is necessary for basic survival and not for stockpiling of resources.

People who join the ranks of the Illuminati fail to see the flaws in what is called the "social darwinism" argument. The ego argument (or ego defense) that wants to satisfy the id's desire for power and rewards is stronger for them than the warning of the super ego against accepting false arguments. The political ideology of social darwinism and eugenics ("we are better than others and meant to be predatory dominant over them") is also the ego argument offered to such people and it is the one they accept and adopt to overrule both the super ego and common sense. Common sense might be thought of as logic and reason (rationality) the ego could choose to follow to render a better decision rather than adoption of illogical and immoral arguments.

Ego and Everyday Life

The Anti-Christ uses adept knowledge of psychology to manipulate his most obvious followers such as the Illuminati, but he also uses the same mechanisms against the rest of us to lead us into sin, acceptance of false doctrines, conflicts and divisions that inhibit our ability to battle against him. Al-Dajjal (the Anti-Christ; literally "The Deceiver") manipulates our intellectual inexperience and need to feel efficacy (a need to feel we successfully use power in controlling events) so that we do not realize we are being manipulated. The ego's belief in "being correct" results in a power gratification from belief that we are correct. It is a feeling of self-efficacy for belief of our intelligence. In contrast, being in error produces feelings of weakness or inadequacy that many people try to avoid at all costs - relying upon excuses and dismissals that are called "ego defenses" - to literally include whatever it is they might lose for an unwillingness to consider they may be in error.

Indoctrination

Like socialization, indoctrination means to be taught the beliefs, values, and behaviors of a group as one becomes a member of that group. Though no real difference exists in the mechanisms of socialization and indoctrination, socialization usually implies a less rigid and less dogmatic process which results in a less rigid and less dogmatic ideological structure within a person's conscious and subconscious than would be produced by more rigid and dogmatic indoctrination. This may be perceived rather than real difference. Indoctrination involves both receiving repetitive messages that convey the group's belief set and repetitive participation in behaviors that accompany that belief set. If emotionally-satisfying rewards accompany participation and acceptance of the beliefs, the behavior and beliefs are likely to become habitual normality due to positive emotional attachment. Some messages of indoctrination hold their own emotional reward: telling a group it is better than others produces emotional satisfaction for members of the group from simply believing it is true.

Along with encouraging acceptance of any morally correct beliefs and behaviors, indoctrination also includes repetitive lessons to teach and encourage adoption of numerous ego defenses that justify acceptance of moral flaws in a group's beliefs and behaviors. For example, in the already mentioned case of the Illuminati, the ego defense taught to justify violent and violating actions against others is that they are meant by nature – by virtue of their alleged higher intelligence - to rule over others and obtain rewards for their dominance. "We are better than others" is a message Illuminati members receive repeatedly and also receive repeated rewards in conjunction with that message so that they come to believe and maintain belief that it must be true. The mechanisms of indoctrination of course work for other groups who are not overtly and purposefully immoral in their purpose but still have flaws within their belief sets. Hence, indoctrination into any religious or political group includes learning a set of beliefs and behaviors that are a variant mixture of the correct and the corrupted and that will usually include the belief that the group's belief and behavior set is without flaw.

Indoctrination can also include the overt teaching of hypocrisy. For example, a child may be told numerous times to not cheat on the rules of any particular game or contest but in watching adults in the game (or when being coached in private), the child may discover the true message the adults want the child to learn is that while of course it is not okay for the competition to cheat and you should protest vehemently if it does, you may cheat so long as you can figure out a clever way to not get caught. Such lessons are bad enough for a child to learn in regards to playing an ultimately meaningless game, but the “cheat if you can get away with it” lesson can have severe negative consequence on others when carried over to social, political, economic, and religious decision-making.

Indoctrination into any set of beliefs works similar to development of a personality disorder (see “Psychopathology” chapter) in that the belief system is also learned behavior, is usually but not always formed in childhood, relies upon repetition of messages and actions, and comes with a set of interwoven arguments or justifications for why these beliefs are vastly preferable to competing sets of beliefs whether they really are or not. If messages delivered during indoctrination were different, belief and behavior would be different.

Divide and Conquer

God explains in Qur'an that each time He has a prophet establish a form of the true religion in worship to Him, the religion begins to corrupt as soon as the prophet departs (dies, disappears, or ascends to heaven). Current and prior Anti-Christians through time have corrupted our different belief sets while also promoting within each group the belief that its particular belief set is infallible as well as incompatible with other belief sets. The system of the Anti-Christ involves layers of falsehood and deception placed over both religious and secular beliefs in a divide and conquer strategy against us.

The divide and conquer strategy relies upon ideological polarization that results from indoctrination into these competing sets of beliefs. While each group's belief set is a mixture of correct and corrupted ideas, a matrix of ego defenses by each group's members is developed to maintain the corrupted ideas within the set despite any scientific, social, scriptural, internal (such as feelings of guilt), or other logical information demonstrating error. Within the matrix of each group's beliefs is one particular ego defense that holds all the others together and keeps groups locked in ideological polarization: we have an infallible belief set while others may have some things correct but also have flaws that doom them.

Dajjal manipulates the human need to feel powerful to promote the strongest possible emotional attachment and determination to defending flaws within our belief sets. He promotes divide and conquer through a need to be right when others are wrong. This inhibits us from communicating across groups to discover what we have in common and to bridge our divisions to unite in opposition to a common enemy.

Hegemony

Hegemony is a term employed by Antonio Gramsci, an Italian marxist writing in the early 1900s. Hegemony is both the process and result of a programming of our minds by the corrupt ruling elite through their control and manipulation of information by government, mass media, education systems, corrupted religion, and other opinion leaders in our communities. The conspiratorial tactics of the ruling class includes to employ individuals to infiltrate community and political organizations including quasi-political organizations that exists as non-profit agencies that provide services to the poor and vulnerable or work to protect public health and environment. Hegemony's biggest force upon the mind occurs however through the norms presented to us in the mass media which includes the misinformation given to us by all the other sources of manipulation and corrupt control.

Hegemony is a fancy academic word that means to exert programmed control over the political thought and actions of a population. According to cultural studies scholar James Lull, Gramsci "emphasized society's 'super structure,' its ideology producing institutions, in struggles over meaning and power." Hence, Lull defines hegemony as:

"A process which through dominant ideology is transmitted, consciousness is formed, and social power is exercised. The power or dominance that one social group holds over others. Rather than direct manipulation of people against their interests, hegemony depends upon social actors accepting their subordinate status as normal. Ideology-dispensing institutions such as schools, government, business, and mass media reinforce each other by perpetuating the status quo as common sense."

(Lull, Media, Communication, Culture, p. 187)

Lull quotes fellow cultural studies scholar Stuart Hall that, "Hegemony is "dominance and subordination in the field of relations structured by power,"" in his explanation that hegemonic relationships can exist between nation states as well as between social groups within a nation. In other words, hegemony occurs in any relationship that contains imbalance of power, including occupational and personal relationships.

Lull notes that hegemony is not merely "social power itself, [but] is a method for gaining and maintaining that power" and explains it was Gramsci's focus on the "super structure" that shifted marxist scholarship away from a focus on the economic base for power differences in society to focus on "its dominant dispensaries of ideas." Lull's elaboration, however, connects these dispensaries of ideas to the economic base and resulting power differences:

"Mass-mediated ideologies are corroborated and strengthened by an interlocking system of efficacious information-distributing agencies and taken-for-granted social practices that permeate every aspect of social and cultural reality. Messages supportive of the status quo emanating from schools, businesses, political organizations, trade unions, religious groups, the military, and the mass media all dovetail together ideologically. This inter-articulating, mutually reinforcing process of ideological influence is the essence of hegemony. Society's most entrenched and powerful institutions - which all depend in one way or another on the same sources for economic support - fundamentally agree with each other ideologically."

(Lull, Media, Communication, Culture, p. 33)

What Lull does not say in that explanation but is said in classic marxist and other legitimate economic scholarship is that the source of economic support for those institutions is the labor of a society's population. The general public supports those institutions through direct labor at those institutions, through purchasing goods and services from those institutions with income received in exchange for labor, and through taxes.

Lull discusses how messages of revolution are co-opted and softened to support status quo dominance of an elite group (for example, public demand for political change is often co-opted as the central message of campaigns of candidates with record-setting corporate support that clearly mark these candidates as puppets of the corrupt ruling class), and how an audience's excessive interest in music, movies, sports, video games, television, other entertainment and even information and news programming can be manipulated to deliver interlocking messages that also support and serve that domination. Lull cites for examples children's television programming in the United States that is comprised mostly of shows that are "associated with successful retail products already marketed to children," and Channel One, described as "an educational news channel shown to students in American elementary school classrooms" that also presents the students with commercial advertisements. Hence, television and schools are used to teach advertisements and consumerism into "taken-for-granted social practices that permeate every aspect of social and cultural reality."

Some other simple examples of "taken-for-granted social practices" not mentioned by Lull include habitual use of automobiles in place of other forms of transit, purchase and consumption of packaged prepared foods, use of hair dryers and microwave ovens, participation in "holidays" such as Halloween and Valentine's Day, and participation in rituals of candy-baskets and colored-egg hunts for Easter or tree decorating at Christmas time. The list of taken-for-granted cultural norms that are in fact created or introduced norms taught to the general public by hegemonic forces of government, mass media, business, schools, and corrupted religion is of course much longer than that short list.

Lull is careful to point out that hegemony does not occur in a direct stimulus-response relationship in which humans are controlled as robots. In further quoting of Hall, he writes:

"Hegemony is not a direct stimulation of thought or action, but . . . is a "framing [of] all competing definitions of reality within [the dominant class's] range, bringing all alternatives within their horizon of thought. [The dominant class] sets the limits - mental and structural - within which subordinate classes "live" and make sense of their subordination in such a way as to sustain the dominance of those ruling over them.""

(Lull, Media, Communication, Culture, p. 33)

In other words, while we are not controlled as robots, the hegemonic powers still tell us not only what to think about, but also how to think about them. When we pattern our knowledge and intelligence from their messages, we are shut off from considering alternatives that have either been defiled with programs of lies or have been even more dogmatically suppressed so the public cannot consider the ideas at all. Lull notes that hegemony also "implies a willing agreement by people to be governed by principles, rules, and laws they believe operate in their best interests, even though in actual practice they may not."

Hegemony versus Resistance

The process by which hegemony occurs is of course very similar if not nearly identical to the concept of indoctrination discussed earlier in this book, except that indoctrination into systems of equity can occur just as easily as indoctrination into systems of power imbalances. For this, Lull and other cultural theorists note that hegemony is not permanent but is fragile, requiring constant "renewal and modification through the assertion and reassertion of power." They also note the process of political indoctrination (of the audience's acceptance of the hegemonic programming) is not only not a closed one, but also that messages of resistance (dubbed "ideological counter-tendencies") exist in a myriad of forms, including within the "seams and cracks of dominant forms." John Storrey describes what is called "neo-Gramscian hegemony theory:

"[N]eo-Gramscian hegemony theory [sees] popular culture as a site of struggle between the forces of "resistance" of subordinate groups in society, and the forces of "incorporation" of dominant groups in society. Popular culture in this usage is not the imposed culture . . . nor is it an emerging from below spontaneously oppositional culture of "the people." Rather, it is a terrain of exchange between the two. . . . The texts and practices of popular culture move within what Gramsci calls a "compromise equilibrium."

(Storey, Cultural Theory and Popular Culture, p. 13-14).

In other words, what we should expect to find in the news and entertainment programming of the mass media as well as in messages delivered through other hegemonic institutions (schools, governments, corrupted religion, and business) are messages of hegemonic influence and messages of resistance to that influence, but that the messages of hegemonic influence greatly outnumber or otherwise outmaneuver the messages of resistance to hegemony. However, the point the cultural theorists are making is that a foundation of resistance to the hegemonic dominance of the corrupt ruling class exists within the public consciousness and holds the potential to be tapped and harnessed for an effective challenge to that dominance.

Presenting themes of resistance and dissent within the dominant mass media is a curious practice of the Illuminati. It is seen by them as profiteering on ineffectual opposition. It is allowed based upon Illuminati belief that no matter how great dissent grows it can always be quashed by the various methods of hegemonic control the Illuminati employ. Thus, Illuminati demonstrate an ignorance of secular history that reiterates the holy book themes of the repeated rise and fall of good and evil in an ongoing battle between them through time. One aspect of the scholarship of Harold Innis not frequently presented is that Innis' research on the rise and fall of empires produced a finding that empires come into existence and are sustained through control of communication (this does not mean armies have not been important in world history but that those armies are comprised of soldiers under hegemonic influence of whomever controls their society's political communication systems), that empires promote technological development, and that eventually through that technological development promoted by the empire itself, a new communication technology is introduced that undermines the hegemonic control of communication systems by the ruling class and that this undermines the empire to lead to its collapse.

The Illuminati themselves have promoted belief in evil and in the epic tale of good versus evil in which good always triumphs. Indeed, this is a standard hegemonic theme of western popular culture that promotes positive emotions within audience members mean to influence the audience to accept other ideas (direct, obscured, and subliminal) presented in the hegemonic programming. As an aspect of the corrupt ruling class' hegemonic programming, the general public expects evil to exist in the world and it expects heroes to arise to lead to its defeat.

Hegemonic Response to 9/11 Truth

The corporate mass media is part of the “military-industrial complex” President Eisenhower spoke of, under control of the corrupt ruling class so the newspaper publishers did not meet President Kennedy's request to stand firm against tyranny and help defend America and our Constitution. However, the newspapers and television news also did not make a mockery of President Kennedy for suggesting that the Soviet Union was employing thousands of people in a conspiracy against democracy in America and around the world. That suggestion had been made by the Illuminati itself years before Kennedy became President, as it was useful in deception against the public to persecute political dissidents and destroy support for communism and socialism (partially by redefining in the public mind what those terms mean), and it was useful to justify an immense post-world-war military budget and continued development of more advanced weapons systems to be misused in the manners President Eisenhower warned against. Indeed, for several decades before Kennedy and for a few years after him, American government and corporate media told the American public that the Russians, then the Soviets, and a secret army of dis-loyal Americans were conspiring to take over American government in order to destroy democracy and exert ill will upon us and the world.

Today, however, that same government and media tell us that only insane people believe organized crime and larger political conspiracies could possibly exist. Consistent response of government officials and corporate media anytime someone utters suggestion of a conspiracy against the general public by wealthy criminals also running big business is to suggest the very idea of organized crime and conspiracy are insane or immensely stupid. This response defies all reason, logic, and history of what is known about organized crime but if this is repeated often enough by Illuminati operatives in mass media and government, it can become an ingrained hegemonic part of the public's belief set, or at least appear as if it is. False appearance of public opinion presented through the mass media and through suppression of dissident voices can hold immense political power in conditioning fear in citizens that they will be ostracized if they speak out in support of dissent:

"our culture has been conditioned incriminatingly to a TV, a radio, or a paper. We are given the world reality through a screen, some ink, or radio waves . . . indoctrination through these mediums warns us that views other than those presented by them are unimportant and too be condemned. This Administration and media monopoly has a carefully crafted dehumanization program to anyone that dissents the official version of events."

<http://rense.com/general69/mass.htm>

In reality, the public may be a mixture of those who openly adhere to the Illuminati conspiracy theory, those who rebuke it, those who believe it but fear saying so, and those who are either undecided or who have no knowledge of the issue. Many people simply do not want to believe such a large conspiracy exists so refuse to consider the possibility. They are aided in denial by Illuminati-controlled politicians and journalists who mock those speaking out against the corrupt ruling class to teach and train their audiences to do the same. Along with some dissident voices, the reference list for this chapter includes a small sampling of online hegemonic articles written by puppets of the corrupt ruling class that deride the idea of organized crime at powerful levels of government.

Ironically, to believe the government's "official story" of what happened on 9/11 is to believe a conspiracy theory that a group of Muslims orchestrated hijacking a set of airplanes and that airplanes crashing into tall skyscrapers can cause those buildings to collapse from the heat of fires produced by jet fuel melting the thick metal beam structural supports of a building in such a manner that the buildings suddenly collapse to the ground without warning rather than leaning or bending for a duration first as those structural supports are melting. One academic investigation into narratives of the 9/11 truth movement versus narratives of the official government conspiracy theory of what happened on 9/11 is that paranoia functioned the same in both sets of narratives. That is to say, the government and mass media have presented a conspiracy theory that directs the audience to be fearful of one set of alleged conspirators while the 9/11 truth movement directs its audience to be fearful of a different set of alleged conspirators.

Celebrity Collaborators and Soul Captives

The Anti-Christ's Illuminati system is one of domination and control of information, economics, and politics. The Illuminati own and control much of mass media to include music recording and distribution, book publishers, television and movie studios and production companies, newspapers, magazines, television and radio stations and networks, and many major Internet sites including some of the most popular “social networking” sites. Mass media control is essential to Illuminati domination over the rest of us by control of what journalists do or do not question and investigate, by control of what portion of what they do question and investigate is then truthfully reported to the public, by creation of faked news events (including some that are presented as major stories of crisis and/or conflict), by insertion of other select lies in news, and by entertainment distraction that includes both regularly scheduled programming and disruptive and divisive scandals.

Celebrities are important tools of the Illuminati either as willing collaborators or as soul captives due to the ability of celebrities to influence millions of other people. Religious and politically-minded celebrities have in the past and continue now to use their positions as celebrities to encourage support for or against political causes and to encourage and role model religious worship. Minimizing opposition within the celebrity industries and cultivating celebrities as a hegemonic force are essential for the corrupt ruling class to maintain control over the public. Controlled celebrities help to suppress, subvert, or mock messages of any good-doer celebrities and to provide gossip scandals and other amusing distractions to keep the audience's focus away from the messages of good-doers.

Illuminati of course seek to gain as much wealth from the entertainment industries as possible. This includes to forge contracts with entertainers, athletes, and others that contain confusing or difficult to understand language that allows them to steal the majority of the profits these people believe they are about to receive for their work. Receiving any income at all - received as periodic stipends rather than in large lump sums as the public might believe - is predicated upon meeting the terms of the contract. This allows for minimization of oppositional voices among celebrities by contractual language that ensures they refrain from oppositional politics or they will not receive any income for their work and they will be barred from seeking other employment. The fine-print details of the contracts are cruel and harsh but they are legally binding. Anyone wishing to challenge the contracts is told by lawyers and others not to do so on two points: 1) the contracts were entered into voluntarily, they are legally binding no matter what corrupt conditions they contain will be the ruling of the court; and 2) your case will never get to court, to even attempt to expose what is in these contracts is to risk your life against assassination.

Controlled Opposition

Another part of the hegemonic process is controlled opposition which is either real opposition to the Illuminati that has found itself under direct Illuminati control (also known as soul captives), real opposition that is limited in perspective and understandings by lack of knowledge and by acceptance of hegemonic programming (once the situation of this author, the situation of many dissidents and many average citizens), or Illuminati infiltrators and collaborators posing as opposition when in fact they work to serve Illuminati goals through presentation of limited perspectives of opposition.

Controlled opposition is a special category among soul captives. They present similar arguments to their own true dissident voices prior to coming under Illuminati control. In this way, they do continue legitimate dissident work but they also have hidden imposed limits on what they can present to the public. This disguise over their control is used to present certain key arguments in favor of the Illuminati's agenda but hidden as arguments opposed to that agenda. Some well-known dissident voices have fallen captive through various methods others become Illuminati soul captives including financial contracts, threat of unemployment, threat of public scandal using real or made-up information, and threat of violence or other harassing interference into the person's life.

Controlled opposition exists not only in person form but in forms of organizations used for hegemonic control of public opinion. For example, The Heritage Foundation presents itself as a conservative patriotic dissident voice of public opinion against rogue government. The Foundation is one of many organizations making intelligent well-researched comment on a number of pressing concerns facing society, including in America the issue of gun control. Notice that despite its stated intent to defend the 2nd Amendment to the Constitution, the Foundation's recommendations still allow for violations of the 2nd Amendment through background checks and banning rights of convicted felons and those diagnosed with mental illness (but who are free in the community because they pose no danger to others). The language of the 2nd Amendment is clear that no abridgment to the right of free citizens to obtain firearms is lawful. The language is also clear that citizens have a right to bear arms - that is, to carry the weapons in public - though this is not mentioned in the Foundation's discussion of that right not yet adjudicated by the Supreme Court.

Many examples of organizations, political movements, and individuals as controlled opposition exist. It is not the purpose of this book to argue against every hegemonic idea presented by controlled opposition nor to start distracting debate about particular groups or people. The purpose is to help educate the reader on some of the tactics the corrupt ruling class use to keep the rest of us under their subordination. Citizens armed with knowledge can easily recognize controlled opposition as it continues to present itself from familiar and new sources of public opinion leadership.

Industrial Disease

Science* tells us that pesticides, cosmetics, fossil fuels, plastics, chlorine (used in paper bleaching and other processes), many household cleansers, spermicides, industrial solvents, and many other products appearing to be helpful to humans are responsible for increased rates of occurrence in several categories of human health risks:

- cancer, bone degeneration, and organ failure;
- birth defects and neurological disorders;
- hermaphrodization and emasculation;
- respiratory and cardiovascular illness; and
- lower immunity to all infectious health risks.

Industrial lifestyle of decreased physical activity, unhealthy diet of non-organic, processed, and modified foods, and pollution are also culprit in increased rates of heart disease, diabetes, autism, obesity, and immune system decline.

Politics of Imperfect Science

Myers and Hessler point out a significant problem in the testing of side-effects of exposure to chemical compound pollutants is that usually only tests of high-dose exposures are done and that may miss detection of effects that do not occur at high doses but that do occur at low doses. They cite the example that high doses of DES (diethylstilbestrol, a cancer-inducing synthetic estrogen) are known to produce offspring described as “scrawny” while laboratory tests using mice demonstrate low doses may contribute to obesity. The failure to test for effects at various ranges of exposure is only one problem in the attempt to identify and catalog different effects of various pollutants. Another common problem cited in the research is inability to control for concomitant risks - other pollutants that can be assumed to be having some influence (independently or in combination with other toxins) on the health of the subjects under study for effects of exposure to a specific pollutant or set of pollutants.

Another problem is money-driven politics in which major scientific findings suggesting pollution is bad for humans are attacked by scientists employed by the industries that produce the pollution. Unlike scientists affiliated with universities and public interests groups, these scientists are dependent upon the polluters for livelihood and therefore, their critiques of the scientific literature cannot be taken seriously but are often cited by Illuminati-controlled governments that do not wish to enact tough environmental laws because to stop pollution requires a major investment the super wealthy do not wish to make in order to re-tool and re-build factories, refineries, and processing plants. Attacks upon findings of legitimate science happen when they are brought to public attention through the news media but also occurs within academia.

In addition to scientists directly employed by polluters, university-affiliated scientists and researchers also sometimes bow to industry pressure in exchange for either bribes or above-board research grants that provide researchers with bonus income on top of their university salaries. Combined with scientists who fail to innovate because their university jobs are secure even if they do not make creative efforts, this can lead to an undesirable situation in which research is being done but is rather pointless. For example, Colborn points out the United States Congress directed the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in 1996 to develop tests that would “detect estrogenic and other endocrine-disrupting chemicals in food and water.” Writing eight years after that directive, Colborn noted no tests yet existed which she attributed to politics fueled by a desire of some scientists to not abandon testing methods they knew would not work:

“Years have been wasted in attempts to utilize traditional toxicological approaches to solve the problem, when in retrospect, it is now apparent that the delay in part stems from the reluctance to attack the problem with novel approaches. Instead of utilizing what is already known about the role of the endocrine system in development and integrating this knowledge with directed science from a broad scope of disciplines, there has been a tendency to hang onto the very protocols that missed endocrine disruption in the first place.”

In addition to producing flawed studies and biased critiques of real science to release to the news media, suspected industry-sponsored scientists routinely publish articles in academic journals in order to confound the findings of real science. For example, on the Our Stolen Future website, vom Saal and Myers provide an analysis of a severely flawed article from the Journal of Toxicology and Environmental Health,

Part B that appears designed to dismiss claims that bisphenol A (or BPA, an estrogenic compound, an endocrine disruptor) is a human health hazard. Another article in the Journal of Toxicology and Environmental Health, Part B questions whether endocrine disruptors in general are human health hazards while yet another discounts endocrine disruptors as having negative effect on human reproductive capability – in both cases, the exact opposite of what science has actually documented. All of the journal's editors might come under suspicion as industry-influenced if not for other articles accurately reporting science and making calls for action to reduce exposure to toxic chemicals. However, the two comprehensive articles just linked also omit BPA. Another article questions whether endocrine disruptors are health risks to other species, and some that acknowledge the dangers of endocrine disruptors make less call for activism than they do for scientists to do more studies of toxins already known to have severe health effects and to perform truly unnecessary work that distracts from both science and activism. One article merely announces a web site about endocrine disruptors that serves as a competitor to Colborn's site.

Politics and limitations of science should be kept in mind when considering research on various forms and sources of pollution. In general, findings that confirm pollution as a risk to human health tend to be cautious, conservative, and understated. Public knowledge of the research findings is further inhibited by obtuse language that prohibits many journalists from understanding the research so that some findings are mis-characterized and industry-paid scientists often receive equal credibility as sources of information. Some news reports of findings only restate a press release sent from a university, research institute, or interest group and do not critically examine the claims made. Many important findings are simply never reported to the public in generalized news media. With obstacles of science and politics, only a small amount of governmental action has taken place to decrease toxins in response to the demands of a vibrant worldwide citizens movement for clean air, water, soil, and food that is supported by publicized and unpublicized science confirming what is often happening in citizens' own lives or those of loved ones, friends, neighbors, and even entire communities: a catastrophic health crisis induced by pollution.

Cancers and Respiratory Ailments

In general, studies on automobile pollution and risks of lung cancer have found what one set of scientists term “a modest association.” However, in commenting on a study of linkage between generalized air pollution and breast cancer, Grant and Garland point out that air pollution blocks and scatters ultra-violet radiation. This decreases vitamin D synthesis from sunlight which in turn increases the risk of cancer and other ailments. They also point out that vitamin D deficiency is increased by urbanization. This is true due to higher air pollution in urban areas and to less exposure to sunlight in general (compare an office worker's exposure to sunlight to that of a farmer, for example). This vitamin D variable could be responsible for some inconsistent results in scientific studies on air pollution and cancer.

Science has been more consistent in finding evidence that automobile exhaust is among the pollutants culprit in rising rates of cardiovascular and respiratory ailments, including asthma, and to deaths from those ailments. However, despite numerous studies suggesting a link between air pollution in general and these ailments, scientists remain cautious and conservative when discussing findings as if they are not quite sure despite all the studies and despite real-life incidents that confirm air pollution is a killer if pollution is thick enough. Not only do numerous studies track increased mortality on days of higher air pollution in specific urban centers, but the death of more than 4,000 people in a matter of four days in London in 1952 from coal-burning particulates trapped in the city's air by weather phenomena also confirms what to many people seems rather obvious that polluted air is a health risk.

Testicular Dysgenesis Syndrome (Emasculation)

Contemporary social critics offering commentary that today's men do not seem as rugged or “manly” as men of past generations often attribute decrease in masculinity to effects of feminism on male psychology. However, science has yet to produce any evidence suggesting that raising males to respect women and treat them as equals has an emasculation effect. The observation is supported, however, by science that says industrial pollution has an emasculation effect. Discussed some in “The South African Runner” and “Disappearing Men” chapters of The Changing Religion, endocrine disruptors lead to a decrease in the number of males born in ratio to females born, hermaphroditization, cryptorchidism (undescended testes), hypospadias (displacement of the urethra opening normally at the tip of the penis), smaller testes, testicular cancer, lowered testosterone levels (inhibiting sexual interest and function), and lowered sperm counts (also inhibiting reproduction). Scientists are calling the increasing prevalence of these problems “testicular dysgenesis syndrome.”

Colborn reports one Native American tribe living along the highly-polluted Detroit River has experienced a resounding shift in birth statistics, from 106 boys born per 100 girls to 56 boys per 100 girls. Colborn understands endocrine disruptor pollution to be a violent assault upon humans and other life forms that begins in the womb. Exposure to other toxins also begins in the womb by being passed through the mother to the developing baby and then repeats after birth through other environmental exposure. Science suggests these other toxins also cause birth defects, cancers, neurological disorders, and immunity and organ failures. Many endocrine disruptors also contribute to these other ill health effects.

Genetically Modified Organisms (GMO Foods)

Genetically modified organisms are plants or animals that have been subjected to artificial alteration at the genetic level by mad scientists for the purpose of increased profits for their employers. The modifications are done by the science of gene-splicing to introduce genetic material into a plant or animal that has come from other plants or animals as well as from bacteria and viruses in order to enhance a certain desired characteristic (for examples: plants that produce their own pesticides, or tomatoes that take longer to ripen and have tougher outer skins to decrease spoilage) or to suppress undesired characteristics. The problem is these genetic modifications alter foods in ways that can cause significant harm to those who consume these unnatural foods.

The GMO industry led by companies such as Monsanto deny the known health risks of GMO foods. Some of these risks are known by correlation (correlation does not prove causation but can strongly suggest it and indicates a need for research to confirm causation or coincidence) such as a 50 percent increase in soy allergies in the United Kingdom in the years immediately following the introduction of GMO soy. Other correlations of human health ailments since the introduction of GMOs foods includes significant increases in gastrointestinal disorders, infertility, asthma, allergies, autism, and diabetes.

Additionally, human health risks are also known or can be expected to occur by historical observation and designed studies testing effects of GMO foods on animal species with scientific understanding that due to our closely related genetic structures, humans are likely to see the same or similar impacts over time. Some of the known effects on animals:

- tumors, organ damage, and death of rats fed GMO corn
- immune system crash in mice fed GMO corn
- sterility, organ damage, increased infant mortality, and early aging, in rats, mice, and hamsters fed GMO soy;
- mass death of sheep, buffalo, and goats fed residuals of GMO cotton plants
- alteration of testicular structure in mice and rats fed GMO soy

Humans may be susceptible to all of these and additional health risks.

One article from the Institute for Responsible Technology notes that one common genetic modifier found in at least 54 edible GMO plants could theoretically lead to increased susceptibility of viral infections from the common cold to hepatitis and Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome. In addition, one study that does exist on human consumption of GMO foods found the genetic modifier induced antibiotic resistance in the humans who consumed it, leading at least one scientist to ponder if GMO foods are part of a purposeful disease economy scheme to induce more illnesses that will then need to be treated with more pharmaceuticals.

Radiation Exposure

In the past few decades of the industrial era, human health has faced another risk in the proliferation of nuclear science. While this has some valuable uses in medicine, it otherwise has been a scourge upon mankind used for producing the most egregious weapons of mass destruction and as a source of electric energy that like nuclear weapons has left behind a massive stockpile of toxic radioactive material that science has been hard-pressed to neutralize as a health risk to current and future generations. Even without accidents and purposeful releases, enhanced radioactive materials (naturally radioactive uranium is “enriched” in production of plutonium for use in nuclear bombs) are difficult to contain even in lead tanks that have already proved allow leakage into soil and ground water. Known effects of radiation over-exposure include thyroid and various other cancers, bone degeneration, and birth defects.

Environmental Racism and Classism

Ethnic minorities and the low-income are targeted both purposefully and incidentally for increased exposure to pollutants. Purposeful incidents occur when an arm of the United States (or another nation's) government chooses to carry out dangerous experimentation on unknowing citizens such as the poisoning of primarily low-income African Americans in St. Louis during the 1950s. Sometimes lack of knowledge and incentive of only a few dollars lure low-income persons to volunteer for dangerous experimentation. For example, a workplace accident at the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in Washington state was used as excuse to conduct an experiment on 64 male prison inmates whose testicles were purposefully exposed to radiation so that the researcher could better answer questions such as “will I become sterile?” of four employees exposed to radiation in the accident even though study of the employees exposed could have provided answers to such questions. While the inmates were ostensibly volunteers (lured by compensation of $5 to $20 per month) even the researcher (who still defended this experimentation years later) admitted the consent forms may not have truly disclosed the risks involved though he claims they were disclosed verbally to the inmates.

Incidental exposure to pollutants occurs from factories and industrial plants that release toxins into the air or water being located in or near low-income communities as well as from workplace exposure that is largely limited to low and middle-income workers in various and numerous occupations. In addition, the low income often face additional stress factors not faced by those with higher income. This stress results in greater rates of mental health issues but also lowers immunity and resistance to physiological diseases, infections, and malfunction. Other risk factors of poverty such as poor diet are also seen as culprit in a documented disparity in health outcomes for the poor and the non-poor.

Despite real incidents of environmental racism and classism, unknowing victims of purposeful and incidental exposure to toxic health hazards are not always ethnic minorities and not always low-income. Purposeful airborne and ground water leaks of radiation from the Hanford nuclear facility, for example, affected rural and urban populations in eastern Washington across all income levels. With exception of Native American reservations and some small farm worker communities, cities and towns across eastern Washington are overwhelmingly of European descent. Above-ground nuclear bomb testing in the state of Nevada during the 1950s exposed predominantly European American populations in the Northwest and mixed populations in the Midwest and East Coast of the the United States to radiation that is identified as culprit in current rates of thyroid cancer and other ailments. Ultimately, the entire human race is facing concomitant risk factors to physical and psychological health from various industrial pollutants found in air, water, soil, and food. Neither ethnicity nor income shield the wealthy and their children from the effects of pervasive pollution.

Pervasive Toxicity

In general, humanity is facing a pervasive toxicity that has been thrust upon us by the makers, sellers, and buyers of numerous industrial inventions from paint thinner and air fresheners to infant formula (largely made with genetically-modified soy; soy also promotes estrogen production) and fluoridated water that has provided fuel for what is termed "the disease economy." Pollutants are in plastic bottles and bags, aluminum cans, cosmetics, skin care lotions, soaps and shampoos, sugarless candy, gum, soda, building materials, the foods we eat, the water we drink, and the air we breathe. This chapter's reference list samples just a tiny amount of available information about effects and pervasiveness of toxic pollution.

The disease economy is an ever-expanding and self-perpetuating system. On one end, disease and deformity are induced in the population through manufacture and sale of numerous products that create massive wealth for the world's richest persons. On the other end, we are sold numerous over the counter and prescription remedies (many of which only manage but do not cure the ailments) and expensive medical services in response to the induced disease and deformity and this also creates massive wealth for the world's richest people. With each new invention, buyers are typically unaware of any associated health risks which the manufacturers may or may not already know about. When science later announces ill effects of these inventions to the public, buyers are often lulled into complacency on the issue by either a lack of or the higher price of healthy alternatives and by failure of government, mass media, and Illuminati-loyal scientists to focus public attention on risk but more often to discount the risks involved as non-existent or exaggerated.

Economic Bust or Boon?: Our Green Future

This chapter offers a summary statement of the situation facing humanity of an impending catastrophic collapse of human health and discusses only a very small sample of the specific sources of toxicity and decreased nutritional value of our food from processing and genetic modification. Reviewing even just a small sample of research on the effects of industrial pollution - as can be done by reading the references to this chapter - can induce feelings of heavy sadness. Some ill effects of contemporary contaminants are just beginning to reveal themselves but others have been known for decades. Some toxins have been banned or reduced in production and use but others remain unregulated, under-regulated, and still in widespread use despite scientific understanding of both ill effects of specific toxins and that industrial-created chemical compounds in general have proven to be health risks.

We may not be able to deter effects of these toxins upon current generations (though science suggests regular exercise, an ultra-healthy diet, and proper stress management may mitigate some effects) but we can create a toxic-free future. Advances in green technologies, manufacturing, architecture, and construction have made it possible to stop producing pollution and to clean up much that already exists without abrupt and chaotic abandonment of industrialization. Wide-scale greening of industry and infrastructure has been blocked so far by unwillingness of the super wealthy to invest in the process, preferring the lie that it is too expensive to stop polluting and clean up the environment or even that the economy will grind to a halt if attempt is made to do so. The truth is the economy would expand rapidly from millions of new jobs created by mandate to green. Owners of small and medium-size business are truthful when they say the cost to green is prohibitive to them, but it is not prohibitive to the super wealthy whose exorbitant wealth from exploitation of the industrial economy can be taxed and distributed for use in cleaning up the pervasive toxicity of that industrial economy.
